

SHIP'S CAPTAIN AIDS U. S. CASE

Tells How Supplies Were Furnished Warships, Vio- lating Neutrality.

New York, Nov. 26.—How the Hamburg-American line succeeded in reaching German warships in the Atlantic in August and September, 1914, with 2000 tons of coal and large amounts of foodstuffs by means of the steamer Prinz, an American boat under the command of a German captain, is a witness stand by the Berwind's captain Fritz Edward Falkenberg.

At the trial of the government witnesses in the trial of Dr. Karl Bueser, Geo. Kotter, Adolph Hochmeister, and others, the chief officials of the Hamburg-Mercantile Marine, on charges of conspiring to deceive and defraud the United States.

At 9:30 at night August 3, ostensibly for Buenos Aires, with Poppinhaus as captain, in charge. To this day, Capt. Falkenberg's first three, her movements were as follows:

First Poppinhaus ordered him to leave the ship at night, after first leaving Sandy Hook, to avoid British cruisers, but later ordered him to steer for the coast of South America, to steam back and forth, as he might meet German ships. For 26 hours the Berwind steamed back and forth over a large area of the Atlantic.

Cargo Is Transferred.
 "The ships were the Cap Trafalgar, the Puntag, the Eleanor Woerner, the Santa Lucia and the German gunboat Eber. The Cap Trafalgar hoisted the signal R. M., meaning 'come nearer,' after the Berwind, on Poppingo, had hoisted the same letters.
 "The weather was stormy, the winds high and the seas heavy, so the Berwind was unable to approach. She stayed 16 days with the German fleet. When the elements moderated, she discharged her provisions, 40 tons of many kinds of foodstuffs, and much of her cargo to the Cap Trafalgar and the Eleanor Woerner.
 "On September 19 or thereabouts, only the Penton and the Cap Trafalgar, to which the Berwind was still discharging her cargo. Before leaving, however, the Elber gave up her guns—two four inch rifles and six one pounders—to the Cap Trafalgar.

Describes Sea Battle.

"On the morning of September 14, 1844," Capt. Falkenberg testified, "the surprised by the British auxiliary schooner, Arcturion, and the Albatross, which came on fast. The Germans turned to flee, and the Berwind, weighing anchor, trailed slowly behind, veering out of range.

"The Arcturion sailed fast," Capt. Falkenberg said. "The Cap Trafalgar steamed south about a mile, then turned right about and faced the Arcturion. They were about two and a half miles apart.

Both Ships Take Fire.

"The Arcturion fired the first shot and then another one before the Cap Trafalgar returned fire. Then she began firing fast. The Pontac kept on her way, leaving the Cap Trafalgar the Curmishia and the Cap Trafalgar were badly afloat and in two hours the Cap Trafalgar was sunk."
